Wednesday, July 11, 2012, 6:00-7:30 p.m.
 Department of Watershed Management
 72 Marietta Street, Atlanta, GA 30303

What is the MMPT?

The Georgia MultiModal Passenger Terminal (MMPT) will bring together various ground and rail transit services in a centralized downtown Atlanta location, providing greater connectivity options to transit services that exist today, and will serve as a hub for future transit, including high-performance and commuter rail.

What will be covered at the meeting?

The master development team will begin with a presentation that describes the requirements for various forms of transportation and provides an overview of the public involvement process. The presentation will then give the public a first look at design sketches detailing alternative footprints for the site of the proposed multimodal station. The public will have an opportunity to comment on the alternatives being presented. Featured speakers include:

- Jim Richardson, project manager for the master development team FIC (transit and redevelopment)
- Ed Campbell, Parsons Brinckerhoff (rail systems)
- Rob Ross, Kimley-Horn and Associates Inc. (bus and transportation network)
