

2020 PREA REVIEW

Interim Chief Reginald A. Mitchell
Atlanta City Detention Center

Overview

The Atlanta City Detention Center (ACDC) is a municipal jail that houses inmates who have been charged with City ordinance or traffic offenses, as well as detainees who have warrants for other jurisdictions. In the past, ACDC boarded detainees on behalf of federal agencies, such as the United States Marshals Service (USMS) and the U. S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE). However, ACDC ceased the practice of boarding federal detainees in 2018. This decision, along with other initiatives such as Cash Bail Reform, led to a dramatic decrease in the inmate population. Most arrestees are now eligible for self-bonds with only a small number of arrestees remaining in the facility long enough to be housed.

Total Incarcerations	8,078	2,576
Total Housed	5,440	1,699

The decreased inmate population likely led in the decrease in sexual assault allegations at the Atlanta City Detention Center. Despite the low number of incarcerated individuals, ACDC remains committed to complying with the Prison Rape Elimination Act (PREA) by maintaining a zero-tolerance stance regarding inmate sexual abuse. In support of that goal, ACDC convened a multi-disciplinary team to review all reports of inmate sexual abuse from 2020. In cases of reported sexual assault allegations, the collected data would be analyzed to assist the agency with identifying areas for improvement and developing corrective action plans that will be outlined below. During 2020, ACDC did not receive any allegations of sexual abuse.

Members of the review team and their respective roles on the team are as follows:

In our ongoing efforts to ensure that our practices match this policy, ACDC engages in an annual review of the previous year's data related to reports of inmate sexual abuse. The multi-disciplinary review team's analysis of the data generates is committed to remaining compliant with the PREA standards and providing an exceptional level of protection for all individuals confined at this facility. This review and the transparency it provided, reinforces our commitment to our efforts to support a Corrections environment with zero-tolerance for inmate sexual abuse.
